

Your Workpath.com, a Workplace Safety, Health, & Well-Being Resource
Oregon Healthy Workforce Center launches new website supporting easy access to tools and toolkits

Portland, Oregon – July 2, 2018 -
Oregon Healthy Workforce Center (OHWC) launches an exciting new website – YourWorkpath.com.

Designed for ease of access, this user-friendly website delivers robust tools and comprehensive toolkits to help employers design a healthier and safer workplace.

The website focuses on delivering low-and no-cost tools and toolkits for organizations of all sizes and industries. From human resource professionals and workplace safety managers to consultants and educators, users will find solutions to fit nearly any setting.

“Workplace health and safety is as relevant today as ever,” said Anjali Rameshabu, OHWC Center Manager. “Considering we spend approximately 1/3 of our lives at work, how we care for ourselves and our fellow employees needs to be top of mind for employers. Healthy employees lead to healthy businesses.”

The new site features include:

- Four Total Worker Health® evidence-based toolkits that covers: all industries, construction, home care, and young workers.
- A number of evidence-informed safety, health and well-being tools
- Information on Total Worker Health®, a holistic approach toward achieving positive workplace culture and worker safety, health, and well-being.
- Additional resources to stay informed on safety, health, and well-being in the workplace

OHWC, housed within the Oregon Institute of Occupational Health Sciences at OHSU, focuses on improving the safety, health, and well-being of workers through Total Worker Health® research, dissemination, outreach, and, education. OHWC is one of five NIOSH Total Worker Health® Centers of Excellence.

Your Workpath.com, a Workplace Safety, Health, & Well-Being Resource cont.

“We want to help create organization and environmental changes in the workplace and these practical solutions can be conveniently implemented within worksites to help employees live healthier, and safer lives,” said Helen Schuckers, OHWC Dissemination Specialist.

Be sure to watch for future updates on the new site, including a launch of our new Your Workpath Program, an incentivized opportunity for organizations to try out and give feedback on the toolkits.

“Worker well-being begins in the workplace,” said Kent Anger, OHWC Director. “Your Workpath is our new campaign and online resource to help workplaces navigate and arrive at better employee safety, health and well-being. We will continue to help workplaces add to their toolbox with our new Workpath website.”

Visit Your Workpath. Contact our Dissemination Specialist, Helen Schuckers at schucker@ohsu.edu with any questions on our new website.

OHWC Faculty & Staff: Dede Montgomery, Helen Schuckers, Ryan Olson, Leslie Hammer, Kent Anger and Anjali Rameshbabu

Our Social Media Channels: Blog, Twitter, Facebook, LinkedIn